DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Deer Creek Methodist Church is an 1885 "meeting house" plan church with a projecting foyer located on the north side of Chestnut Hill Road about 50 yards east of the Deer Creek Church Road intersection in Chestnut Hill, Harford County, Maryland. The main door faces southwest.

The main section and the foyer both have slate gable roofs. The foyer has five-panel double entrance doors with a stilted arch transom. A dentil molding on the transom bar is the only decorative trim. The transom is stained glass with the lettering "Deer Creek Methodist Church". Above the foyer is a small round stained glass window. Flanking the foyer are lancet stained glass windows with pointed arches and sliding sash. Along the side elevations are three more lancet windows of the same type. At the rear or northeast elevation is a small addition with an interior brick chimney and a composition roof. The foundation of the main section is stone and the original exterior covering, probably weatherboards, is now covered with vinyl siding.

The interior of the church was not observed during this survey, but a church historical pamphlet states the original plan had two side aisles where men and women customarily sat on opposite sides. Coal stoves heated the hall, and oil lamps provided light. In 1942, the present center aisle plan was adopted, the stoves removed, and electricity provided. Some of the stained glass may date from this period of remodeling.

The church cemetery extends around the east, north, and west sides of the church.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The present Deer Creek Methodist Church is the second building on the site. The first building was a log meeting house erected about 1826-29. After the present church was built, the log church was sold to Thomas J. Robinson, a neighboring farmer, who used the timbers to build a barn.

The Deer Creek Methodist Church was part of the Deer Creek Circuit, organized in 1829 by Rev. Eli Henkle. He formed Methodist meetings in Harford County at Log Meeting House, Wesleyan Chapel, Watter's Meeting House, Abingdon, Calvary, and Union Chapel. The "Log Meeting House" may have been the original Deer Creek Church building in Chestnut Hill.

Joseph Ward donated a parcel of land to the Methodist meeting on February 8, 1826 or 1828 (both years are given in different places in the church history pamphlet). The exact sequence of events is unclear, but the first meetings were apparently held in the home of John H. Barrow. The log church was built sometime between 1826 and 1829. It was known for some years as Ward's Chapel of the Christian Society. At times, the Deer Creek Church belonged to the Bel Air Circuit. On March 16, 1869, the church was incorporated as the Deer Creek Methodist Protestant Church. The church appears on the Martenet map of 1878 as "Deer Creek Chapel".
